Down the Wild River North	Helmericks, Constance	Pleasure Reading	In 1965, Connie Helmericks announced to her two daughters 12 and 14 years old that they were going to make a canoe expedition to the Arctic Ocean. For two successive summers, Helmericks and her two daughters voyaged down the Peace, Slave, and Mackenzie river systems to the Arctic Ocean. They navigated rapids and floating tree jams on the often flooded rivers, lived with bugs, wind and mud, visited isolated riverside inhabitants and enjoyed it all with great good humor.	166	1968
Freshwater Saga	Morse, Eric W.	Pleasure Reading	This book is a saga in the sense of being a personal chronicle of events over the sixty year period 1918-1978 - memoirs of a lifetime's canoeing which was almost entirely done in my vacations and for no more reason than recreation. The book covers a good part of Canada east of the Rockies, extending north to the mainland coast of the continent; most of this canoeing was on the Precambrian Shield. The Canadian Shield helped spin the web of interconnecting rivers and lakes that covers half of Canada, an unrivalled system of 'highways' extending over a quarter of a million square miles of forest-lakeland and comprising a good part of the whole world's fresh water. Such is the back ground tapestry of this tale.	167	1987
Never Turn Back	Watters, Ron	Pleasure Reading	The Life of Whitewater Pioneer Walt Blackadar. This is the gripping and compelling life story of Dr. Walt Blackadar, a physician from a small town in Idaho. At the age of 49, he shocked the outdoor world when he made a solo kayak journey down the treacherous rapids of Turnback Canyon on the remote wild Alsek River in Canada and Alaska.	170	1994
On the River - A variety of Canoe &amp; Small Boat Voyages	Teller, Walter Magnes	Pleasure Reading	On The River chronicles the kinship of people, craft, and natural wonder through sensitive accounts of late 19th and early 20th century voyages by canoe and small boat. For the men and women herein their travels held special definition, their adventures, short and long, carrying them from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico along rivers and lakes of America. These are deeply personal experiences, told in clear often moving prose, and though many of the personalities, place names, and lovely settings will be new to readers, the wellknown are also represented. Henry Thoreau, Frederic Remington, poet John Boyle O'Reilly, and Edward Chichester have recorded perceptions which make a fellow voyager of the	171	1988
Rivers Running Free	Niemi, Judith & Wieser, Barbara	Pleasure Reading	A journey down the Chattahoochee and Apalachicola Rivers.	#92 #173	1987
Shackleton's Way - Leadership lessons from the great Antarctic Explorer	Morrell, Margot & Capparell, Stephanie	Pleasure Reading	From 1914-1916, Ernest Shackleton and his men survived the wreck of their ship, Endurance, in the crushing Antarctic ice, stranded 1,200 miles from civilization with no means of communication and no hope for rescue. The temperatures were so low the men could hear water freeze. They subsisted on a diet of penguins, dogs, and seals. And when the ice began to break up, Shackleton set out to save them all on his heroic 800 mile trip across the frigid South Atlantic - in little more than a rowboat. Unlike most other polar expeditions, every man survived - not only in good health, but also in good spirits-all due to the leadership of Shackleton.	174	2001

Shooting The Boh - A Woman's voyage down the wildest river in Borneo	Johnston, Tracy	Pleasure Reading	When Tracy Johnston signed up for a rafting expedition down Borneo's Boh River, she had no idea that it had never been fully navigated-or that its rapids were so treacherous that her party, a group of eccentric fellow adventurers from all over the globe, would soon be calling it the "Boh Constrictor." No one had told her about the local wildlife, which included swimming cobras and swarms of sweat-eating bees, or about the Boh's population of evil spirits. But perhaps, the most frightening discovery that Johnston made was what she learned about herself; about what it means to be an adventurer-a woman adventurer-on the wrong side of forty, hampered by a changing body and the fear, loss, and envy that haunt any woman in a world that even in Borneo seems made exclusively for the	175	1992
Songs of the North	Olson, Sigurd - Introduction by Howard Frank Mosher	Pleasure Reading	Sigurd Olson wrote in the middle of his career as a nature essayist. 'More than terrain, more than woods, lakes, and forest, it had promise and meaning and sang of the freedom and challenge of the wilderness. Within me was a constant longing, and when I listened to this song, I understood.' "Part frontiersman on the last great northern frontier of America, part poet and philosopher, and a fierce preservationist long before the term was coined, Sigurd Olson never lost his sense of wonder and delight in the presence of wild places and wild things	176	1987
The Voyage of the Narwhal	Barrett, Andrea	Pleasure Reading	Part adventure narrative, part love story, this extraordinary chronicle captures a crucial moment in the history of exploration, the mid-nineteenth century romance with the mystery of the Arctic. Combining fact and fiction, Andrea Barrett focuses on Erasmus Darwin Wells, a scholar-naturalist accompanying the expedition of the Narwhal. Through his eyes we meet the crew members and the expedition's blustery commander, obsessed with the search for an open polar sea, and we experience the wild, disturbing beauties of that last unexplored region. On the Narwhal, everyone is frightened, nothing is certain, and heroes emerge in unexpected guises	177	1998
Where Rivers Run (This copy is signed)	McGuffin, Gary & Joan	Pleasure Reading	Author's account of their 2-year odyssey across Canada by canoe, 6,000 miles from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Beaufort Sea. Thru challenges & hardships along the way, they discovered a Canada most never see.	178	1999
Woman of the Boundary Waters	Kerfoot, Justine - Foreword by Les Blacklock	Pleasure Reading	The Boundary Waters region of Minnesota and Ontario is a vast wilderness of quiet beauty. Justine came here in 1928, a Northwestern Univ. graduate student headed for medical school, until her family lost both their homes to the stock market crash. Thrust into year-round life at her mother's fledgling summer resort, Justine was confronted with learning survival in frigid northern woods. She writes about her environment with sensitivity and acceptance. Her lyrical description of wildlife and seasonal environments express the deep reverence for life and nature which has been integrated into her being. In her book as in her life, she expresses love and appreciation of all living	179	1986

The Exploration of the Colorado River and its Canyons	Powell, John Wesley	Pleasure Reading	The time is May 24, 1869. The place: the Green River portage, in present-day Wyoming. Major John W. Powell, one-armed Civil War veteran, later head of the U.S. Geological Survey and 9 geologists, geographers, scouts, and adventurers are about to begin their assignment to fill in the last white space on the map, to explore the last great unmapped and unknown part of the continental United States. Major Powell wrote the account of this remarkable expedition, and his narrative is one of the great classics of exploration, as thrilling as the feat itself. As we follow Powell's journal (expanded for publication), we find the ten men sailing through wild waters, momentarily expecting rapids around the next bend; and finding rapids, throwing out drag anchors, while one advanced boat tries to find through-flowing channels. We see mutiny, as 3 men refuse to face the perils any longer, and desert-to be massacred by the hostile Indians. Even famine did not stop them and 6 men finally emerged, after 95 days of	192

The Wilderness Companion	Backes, David	Pleasure Reading	For years, whenever the legendary conservationist Sigurd Olson embarked on a canoe trip, he took along scraps of paper, onto which he'd copied bits of poetry and philosophy. When he reached the serenity of wilderness, Sigurd would pull one of the scraps out of his "medicine bag", anchor it on the seat of his canoe with a stone, then read it and reflect upon its meaning. Inspired by Sigurd's practice, The Wilderness Companion is an extraordinary collection of thoughts designed to enhance the meaning of time spent with nature. Although it closely resembles a book, The Wilderness Companion is really a medicine bag. It's a prescription aimed at the heart, soul, and mind of the reader, and it reflects the belief that thoughtful contemplation is simply good medicine.	204	1992
The Bird in the Waterfall	Dennis, Jerry. Drawing by Glenn Wolff	Pleasure Reading	The Bird in the Waterfall is a celebration of the wonders of water and a lively foray into the natural history of rivers, lakes, and oceans. With engaging text and illustrations, author Jerry Dennis and illustrator Glenn Wolff explore waterfalls and seeping springs, ocean waves and tidal bores, whirligig beetles and torrent ducks, mermaids and mantees. This book blends interesting and usual scientific research with historical anecdotes, mariner's tales, folklore, and personal observations to address dozens of age-old aquatic mysteries. Why do rivers meander? It is a passionate appreciation for the magic, music, and poetry of water, and an appeal for the protection of this most precious of the earth's resources.	208
District Lands ... Yours to Enjoy -3rd Edition	Suwannee River Water Management District	Trails - Paddling	The District's land management strategies are designed to ensure a balance between public access, general public recreational purposes, and restoration and protection of the natural state and condition.
